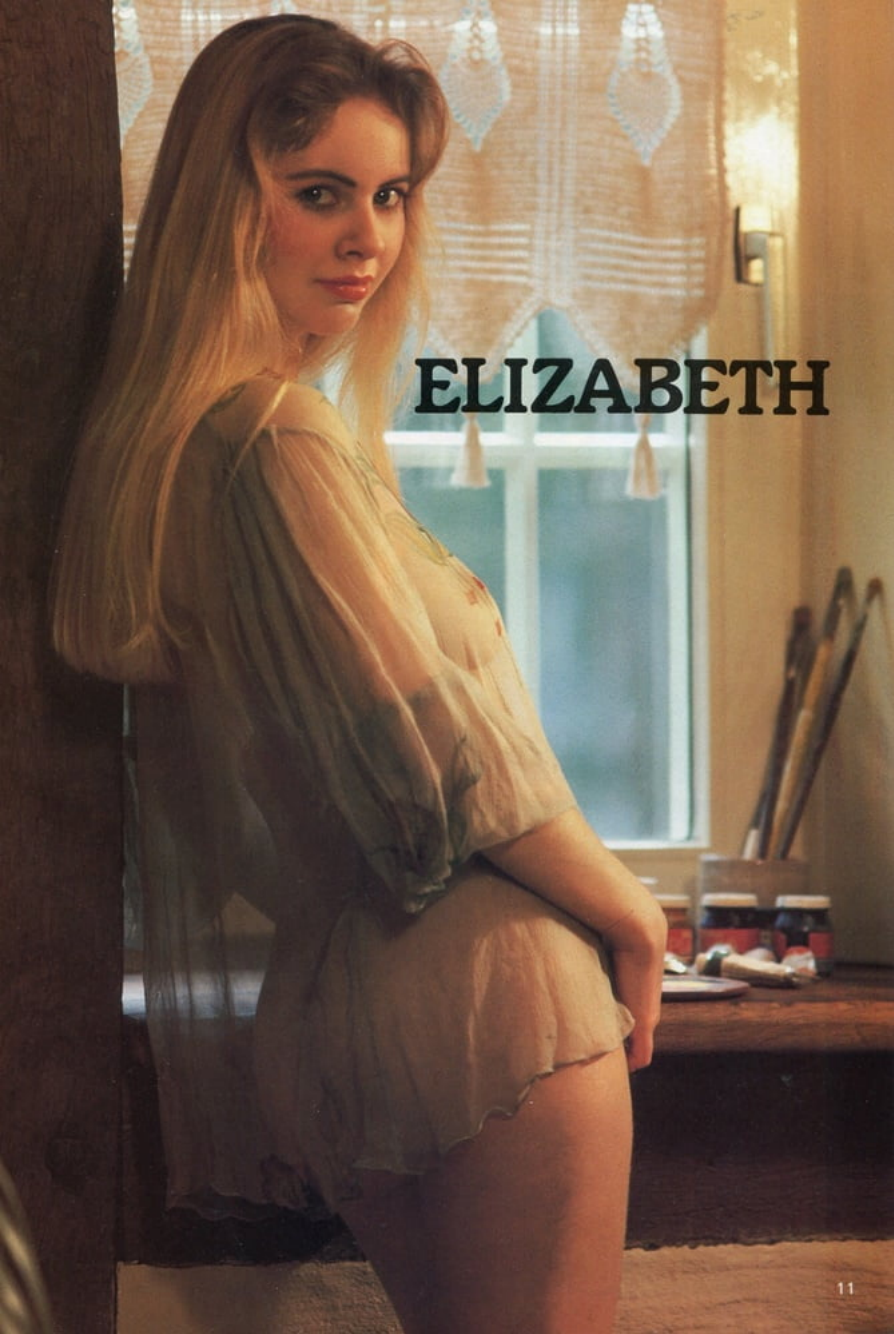
'Good news, dear, I got 35 per cent off the extension, and the double glazing thrown in free!'



ELIZABETH

Pretty as a picture is an apt phrase to describe 19-year-old Elizabeth Cartwright because she has been immortalised in many paintings from oils to watercolours. A fine art student at one of the London colleges, Elizabeth's 34-24-34 figure can often be found on the other side of the easel as she is in great demand as a model. 'This is the first time I've done photographic modelling,' she told us, 'and it's a lot less tiring than standing still in one position for hour after hour.'

'Would you like to pop round for a cup of tea?' The invitation seems quaintly old fashioned in these days of fast food and quick drinks, but to 26-year-old Laura Anthony, it is perfectly natural. 'I gave up alcohol three years ago,' Laura said, 'and since then I've really grown to love tea and all that goes with it.' And by tea, she is not referring to a cup of PG Tips. Laura includes in her collection Earl Grey, Lapsang Souchong, Rose Touchong, Orange Pekoe and China Oolong as well as a particularly fragrant Yunnan. 'And don't ask for milk and two lumps of sugar with it,' she added quickly, 'that simply isn't done with a fine tea.'

Elizabeth, who in true student style shares a rambling north London house with a group of friends, spends most of her spare time at the Tate Gallery admiring the work of her heroes like Andy Warhol. 'At night I like to relax completely with a few glasses of wine, or go out dancing in a West End club.'

MAXINE DUNNE

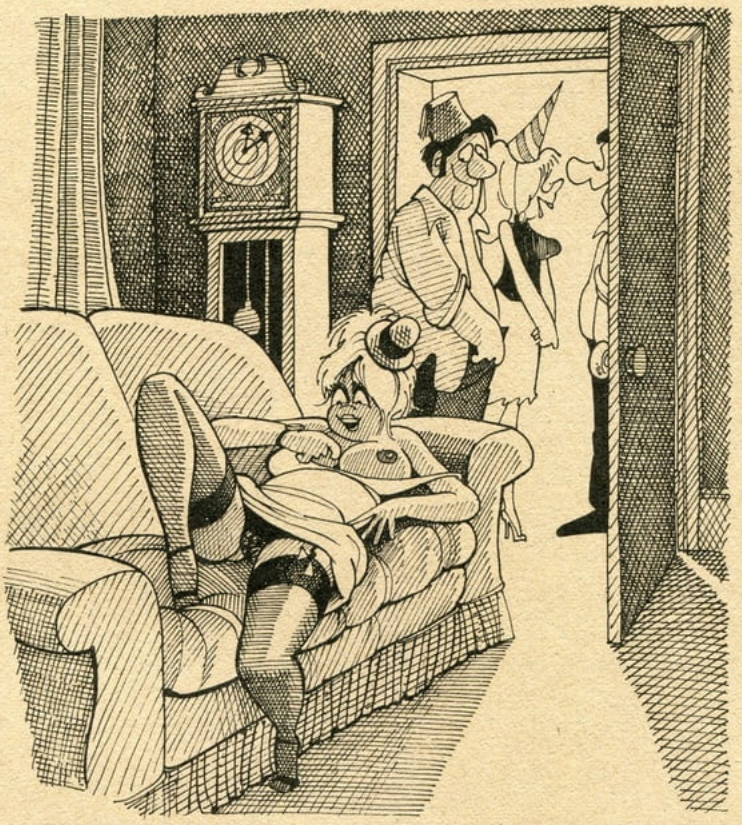
MISS SCOTLAND FINALIST

PHOTOGRAPHED BY DONALD MILNE

Many of our models have entered beauty contests, but few have been as successful as 22-year-old Maxine Dunn. Maxine, who hails from Bishopbriggs in Glasgow, was the runner up in Miss Scotland 1984, and third the year before that. Her 36C-22-33 figure has also won her the title of Miss Warehouse (from the Warehouse night club in Glasgow), Miss Wet Teeshirt Scotland, and Miss Rear of the Year – where her prizes included a stereo, and leather trousers.

Maxine has now given up beauty contests, believing that her topless and nude work might prejudice some people. It has not stopped her appearing on television, however – Maxine has filmed a commercial for Apollo blinds. She started entering contests almost as soon as she left Uddingston Grammar School at 15. Her first job was in a boutique in Glasgow's Barrowland, then came her successes in the beauty contest world. Several of her victories were in the Warehouse club, where Maxine can be found almost every Sunday. For the rest of the week, she divides her time between Henry Africa's, Bennett's and Charlie Parker's pub. Or, if she fancies a meal with someone special, she opts for the Baby Grand restaurant.

From her long list of favourite clubs, it's easy to see that Maxine is a pop music fan. Her favourite singers are Elton John, Rod Stewart and David Bowie, though from the look that comes into her eyes as she talks about them, it seems that she fancies more than their music. She also likes the cinema, going gooey-eyed over Robert Redford, and splitting her sides at Mel Brooks films. However, these days, she mingles with celebrities, rather than watching them on the screen. Recently she played golf with Telly Savalas at Troon. 'He's a really nice man,' she said generously bearing in mind that he beat her hollow. When we spoke to her, Maxine was taking a break from work at the Scottish Motor Show. 'I'm on a commercial vehicle stand,' she told us, 'but I admit that I know nothing about trucks at all.' On this occasion she was fully clothed, but still added a touch of glamour to the lorry display. If you missed her, never mind, her career looks like it's on the up and up, and there should be plenty of opportunities to see more of bonnie Miss Dunn in the future.



'Oh well, at least my resolutions lasted five minutes longer than last year.'

Giving up— and giving in

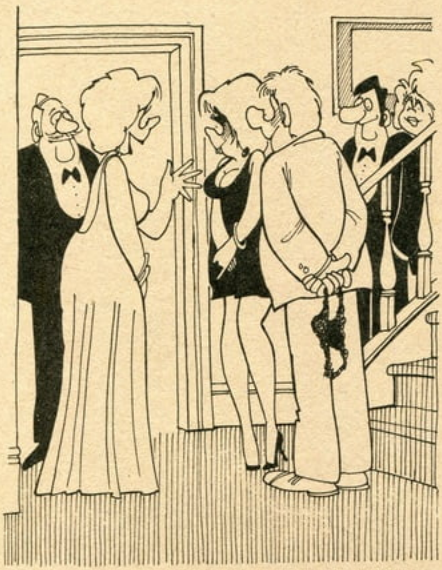
New Year resolutions take a lot of willpower but, says cartoonist Anthony, don't forget that where there's a will, there's a lay

'Watch out, Sandra! He's made the same resolution as last year.'

'No, I'm not suffering any withdrawal symptoms – well, not yet anyway.'

'Since I gave up smoking I find I have to do something with my hands.'

'Oh, I quite agree, vicar – one shouldn't go to the extreme and give up all one's little pleasures.'



'And what about you, darling – what did you decide to give up?'

'Joanne! You're smoking again.'

'It's no good, Martin, I'll just have to accept the fact that I've got absolutely no willpower.'

Susie

PHOTOGRAPHED BY PAUL VON STROHEIM

Ask 19-year-old Susie Beresford what she does for a living, and her answer is immediate. 'I sell PVC gear,' she replies. So why didn't she choose to be photographed in some of her sexy wet-look products? 'I don't think they'd be very flattering,' she laughed. And she's right. For Susie works in a Do-It-Yourself warehouse, and her plastic ware consists of PVC guttering, not exactly the ideal complement to her 34-23-34 figure. 'I'll have a go though,' she joked. We didn't take her up on it. Instead we invited her from her home in Bromsgrove, Worcestershire to show us what many Midlands DIY enthusiasts have been fantasising about since she joined. 'Don't think I'm an expert at home improvements though,' she said. 'I'm only on the till.'

In fact, Susie's last attempt at decorating her flat more closely resembled Carrie's misadventures than an expert DIY demonstration. 'I was wearing an old boyfriend's boiler suit, and still got covered in paint. Would you believe I even found some on my pubes!' So instead of tackling such tasks, Susie devotes her time to other hobbies, her current favourite being cultivating her indoor plants. 'I talk to them all the time,' she said. 'And they have the radio to listen to. My begonia knows the words to pop songs before I do.'

Do the handymen that she meets every day ever number amongst her boyfriends? 'I have been out with a few men who are good about the house, if you see what I mean,' she said. 'And if, like me, you don't know one end of a hammer from another, it is a good thing to know someone who can unblock your pipes.' However she has no plans to make any of them permanent fixtures. 'I'd only settle down with someone 100 per cent reliable.

Kaie
PHOTOGRAPHED BY JOHN ALLUM

Presenting Kaie, a sexy 18-year-old in her first-ever modelling session. Her glamour debut marks the fulfilment of a long-standing ambition, for Kaie McDonald (as we shall surname her) has always wanted the opportunity of showing off her 34-22-34 figure in Mayfair. 'I was over the moon when I was told John Allum wanted to photograph me. I've always wanted to be a model as it seemed the natural thing for me to do, and Mayfair is hitting the top. I suppose I'm an exhibitionist.' Kaie has just given up a secretarial job in Milton Keynes to take up a full-time modelling career. 'I'm paranoid about my figure now.'

Kaie admits to being a nutcase, but her clowning around ended in tears recently when she was showing off in the city centre. 'It was a Saturday afternoon, and I was dancing around when I walked straight into a pillar. I cried my eyes out I was so embarrassed, and I had a black eye for a few days.' She loves dancing, and is training to join a dance troupe who perform with the Jade disco roadshow in Milton Keynes. And her showbiz ambitions don't end there. 'I sing with a friend, and we're looking for a group. She wants to be a model as well so you might see her in Mayfair one day.'

If you're ever lucky enough to bump into Kaie at The Pilgrim's Bottle, her favourite pub, don't crack any jokes about Milton Keynes as she is very loyal to her town. "I wouldn't like to live anywhere else, even if it is a bit boring at night." When she's in the mood for a late night, you'll find Kaie at Tiffanys in nearby Dunstable, as well. "But I don't wear revealing clothes. I tend to go for unsual ones so I still get the looks.' And as if that isn't enough exercise, Kaie takes aerobics classes. When she is in a quieter mood, her hobby is writing letters. 'I get penfriends from magazines, or drop a line to people I've met on holiday. But,' she admitted, 'I'm no good at writing anything romantic.'

Megan

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ED ALEXANDER

If you walk down the High Street of Rhosneigr, a village on the Welsh isle of Anglesey, from the clock tower, past a parade of shops, and then turn right down Harrison Drive, you will come to one of the best beaches Britain has to offer. That's the view of 21-year-old Megan Hughes who remembers that walk from her childhood. 'We often used to stay there,' she told us, 'and I can remember making sandcastles with a bucket and spade we bought from a little shop at the top of the drive.' That was 15 years ago, and Rhosneigr is now more bustling than in Megan's youth. But if that Welsh village has grown up, then so has Megan – quite beautifully. Her 38-24-35 figure is almost as undulating as the mountains that surround her home in Bangor, and her hillsides have a welcome of their very own. 'Wales is renowned for buxom girls,' claimed Megan. 'I was far from the biggest in my school, though one of my bras was on display in a rugby club – labelled "The Prop Forward."'

Megan is too old now to devote so much time to a bucket and spade, instead she has to tour around North Wales in her professional role as a travelling saleswoman. Cuddly toys are her only company on her long journeys, because they are what she is there to sell. 'It's quite sad when you grow attached to a particular teddy, and you have to sell him to a grumpy shopkeeper,' she said with a pout, but seriously she never lets sentiment interfere with business, as her sales manager will testify. 'I do sell a lot,' Megan commented. 'I think it's because I look so much like a cuddly toy myself.' Right now, she will just be beginning to relax after the Christmas rush, though she plans to celebrate the New Year in style. 'I'm going to a party in Holyhead which will probably go on until dawn at least,' she said. 'Practically all of North Wales will be there. Who knows Sian Adey Jones might even turn up!' Then it will be back to her slate grey cottage for a day curled up by the fire before she hits the road again. 'There's no peace for the wicked,' she grinned.

When she does have some time to spare Megan can be found in one of several night spots in Bangor. For cocktails, she pops into the British Hotel by the railway station. 'They do the best pina colada in Gwynedd,' she insisted. Then she likes to pop down to the marina at Portdinorwic for a meal at the Half Way House. Finally for a drink with her friends, she can usually be seen snuggling up in the bar of the Tai Uchaf, opposite the harbour. But don't ask her what it means. 'I don't speak much Welsh,' she claimed, 'though we did it at school. I'm certainly not one of those people who use it to be rude about the English to their faces without them knowing, though I know a few girls who do.' Megan does however have one very Welsh attribute – her voice. As well as a lilting accent, she also sings beautifully. 'I started in the chapel choir,' she recalled. 'But I was thrown out after an incident with a pet mouse. I let it crawl up the leg of little Dai's shorts. I bet his soprano voice didn't come down for a month or so afterwards. There's naughty.'

SHEILA

PHOTOGRAPHED BY JEAN ROUGERON

We know that Mayfair readers like to be told the girls' statistics. In the case of 21-year-old Sheila Tracey, these are 34-22-33, but Sheila is anxious to point out that she does not consider them to be her most vital ones. Instead, the figure she regards as most important is 142. Before you start puzzling over which part of her could possibly be that size, Sheila will explain. 'It's my IQ,' she says. 'I've just done a voluntary test for MENSA, and that was what they measured it at. I'm thrilled.' Not surprisingly, since this makes Sheila eligible to join MENSA's brainy membership.

But Sheila doubts whether she will in fact join the exclusive society for the intelligentsia. 'I don't like the idea of any club solely for one sort of person,' she insisted. 'I know people with no O levels who are far more interesting than so-called geniuses.' So why did she do the test? 'I've always been good at those sort of puzzles,' she said dismissing questions that would have mere mortals struggling for hours. 'And I wanted to get rid of the dumb blonde image for ever. Now I can prove we are not all Jayne Mansfields.' However, Sheila admits that it was her good looks, not her great brain, that got her the job as receptionist for a printing firm in Essex. 'Mind you, I do think people like to be greeted with warmth and efficiency, rather than just a vacuous grin,' she said. 'After all, I am the first person the client meets, and first impressions are very important to a cômpany.' For the same reason, Sheila restricts her social life to the weekends. 'I'm not paid to look bleary-eyed after an all-night session at the disco,' she maintained, with much commendable loyalty.

At the weekends, however, Sheila does like to let her hair down. 'I love parties because I enjoy conversation and meeting different people,' she said. 'My ambition is to know something on every subject under the sun. I have a voracious appetite for knowledge.' In fact, after her photo session, she was examining the antique furniture in the house where these pictures were taken. 'I've just read a book on the Chippendales,' she said. 'So that's my new passion. Do you suppose people will think this is mine? I hope so. Perhaps one day ... Even geniuses can dream.'

DIANE

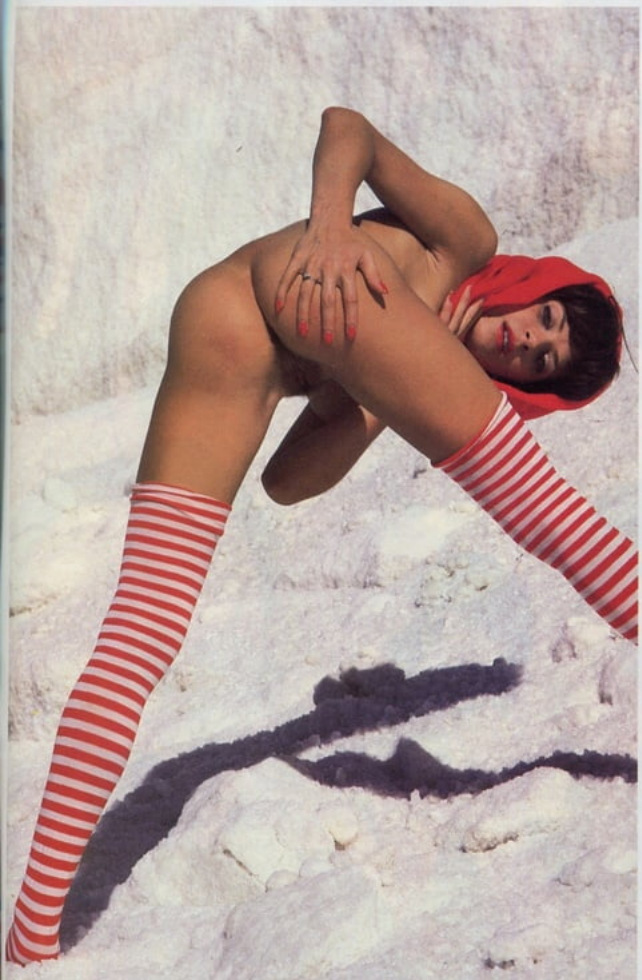
YAN SVENSSON

Following in the giant boot prints of Chris Bonnington comes 21-year-old Diane Fullerton. For despite her slim 34-23-34 figure, Diane is an amateur rock climber, and although the peaks she scales aren't quite on the same level as the Himalayas, she has still climbed higher than many men might dare. A lot of her ascents have been in the Lake District close to her home in Preston. 'It all began when I climbed Snowdon at the age of five,' she said with a laugh. 'Mind you, that was by the easy route – the narrow gauge railway!' Now though she eschews all artificial assistance save for a rope. 'I have several quite awkward climbs rated "v. diff" to my credit,' she boasted.

When Diane isn't concentrating hard on the slow and steady climb up a mountain, she is learning the fastest way to come down. 'I've just taken up ski-ing,' she said. 'But I'm a real novice at that as yet. However wait until the end of the winter, then you'll really see something.' During the day, Diane's work is much more down to earth. She is a shop assistant in an electrical store. 'I'm the leading light of the shop,' she joked, then added, 'sorry about that, just giving myself a plug.' With jokes like that it's surprising nobody has left her stranded up a mountain. 'My humour may be corny,' she said, 'but I do have my uses.' We are not offering prizes for suggestions.

Diane decided to have a go at modelling when some fellow climbers were ogling a copy of Mayfair in a bar. 'I suppose I was jealous that none of them were paying me any attention, so I rashly said that anyone could do it. Naturally they then dared me . . .' she recalled. How did she get on? 'It was a lot harder than I thought, and very chilly, but still good fun. Yes, I'd do it-again when it's warmer!' Do any members of her climbing club ever team up with her for something more intimate than mountaineering? 'We do get amorous in the bar occasionally,' she said. 'But with the amount of clothing we have to wear, a quickie outside is right out of the question.'



CARRIE

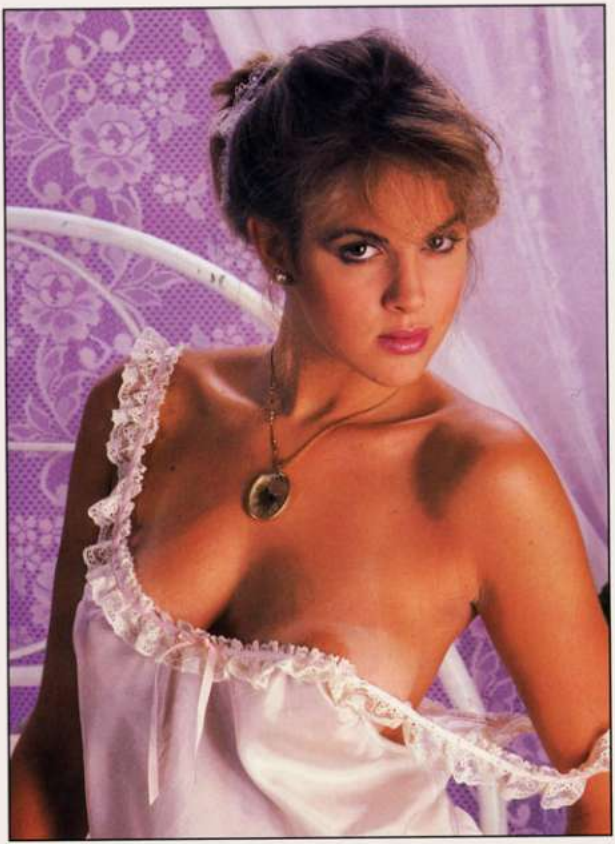
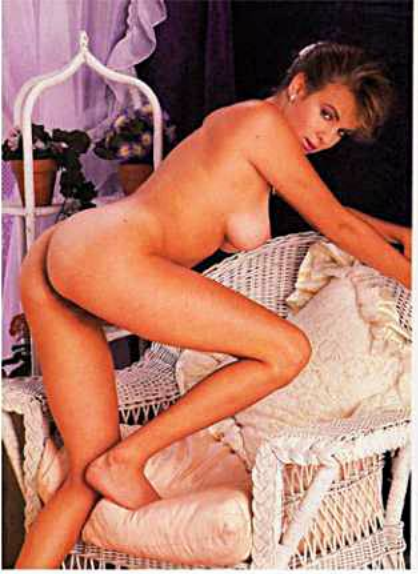
Steve Kolston



Laura

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ROY BREWINGTON



As well as being the founder and sole member of the Campaign for Real Tea, Laura likes to dress and decorate her Basingstoke home with lots of frothy lace, 'Just because I have an imposing figure,' she said referring to her much admired 37-24-36 curves, 'does not mean I have to look "obvious". Tight jumpers, skimpy teeshirts and short skirts are out for me. Give me frilly dresses and lacy lingerie every time.' Nor are you likely to find her boogieing at the local disco. 'Good heavens no!' she exclaimed. 'Though I can do most of the ballroom steps. That's one of my accomplishments, as Jane Austen would have put it.' Further evidence, if needed, of her sense and sensibility.

MAYFAIR'S
GIRL OF THE MONTH
LAURA ANTHONY

By day, Laura works for a travel agency. 'I admit I was lured by the idea of being involved with far-away places with strange sounding names,' she confessed. 'But really it is a desk job like many others.' In fact in these days of easy foreign travel she admits to being a little blasé. 'Actually it takes longer to arrange a saver return on British Rail to Birmingham than a trip to China with a one-night stopover in Singapore,' she claimed. 'Not that I've been to either of them.' Laura does however still harbour a desire to see more of the world. Of all the gems it offers, India is the jewel in the crown. 'It's not just because of the TV series,' Laura insisted. 'I would like to sample the culture . . . and of course their tea.'
